CONFIDENCE MEN GET $600 AND RING

R. E. Maxwell, of Los Angeles, Is Victim of Coin-matching Swindlers.

SCHEME CLEVERLY EXECUTED

While a traffic policeman stood twenty yards away and matinee throngs hurried by, two confidence men yesterday afternoon swindled R. E. Maxwell, proprietor of two drug stores in Kingsbury, Cal., of a diamond ring and travel agent's checks having an aggregate value of more than $600.

When Maxwell related at police headquarters how he had been bunked, telegrams were dispatched stopping payment on the checks, warnings were sent to pawn dealers to watch for the ring, descriptions of the swindlers were wired to other cities and Central Office cleared of all detectives, every available man being sent out to search.

Maxwell, while walking in the Capitol grounds yesterday afternoon, was approached by a stranger, who opened the conversation by saying he would like to buy some of Maxwell's snapshots after they were developed and printed. Together they walked up Pennsylvania Avenue.

Shows Travelers' Checks.
At Seventh Street cigs were purchased and Maxwell displayed his travelers' checks. At Fifteenth Street and New York Avenue they stopped for a chat and met an Englishman. The Englishman observed that the public buildings in London were far superior to the buildings here, and casually remarked in an aside that America was lamentably short on sports.

The stranger resented this remark and offered to match quarters, then dollars, then five dollars, and up to one hundred dollars. A policeman was not sixty feet away while the gambling progressed and the Englishman wanted cash and crossed the street to buy them. While he was away the stranger said to Maxwell:

"You get in on this and turn up 'heads' every time and we'll trim that 'beef' every time." Maxwell "fell."

When the Englishman returned Maxwell himself admits he joined in the coin-matching, and the stranger rapidly won from the Englishman. The Englishman, who was as much a stranger to Maxwell as the man he met in the Capitol grounds, lost about $200 to the stranger and then grew angry, exclaiming:

Started Toward Policeman.
"You're a couple of beats. This man here (indicating Maxwell) hasn't shown a penny yet. I don't believe he has any money, and I think I'll tell that bobby there about you two." Maxwell promptly took his travelers' checks from his pocket and handed them to the man with a finger and gave them to the man he had met in the Capitol grounds. But the Englishman refused to bet any more and started toward the policeman.

"He had met better beat it. I'll meet you around the corner," said the stranger to Maxwell. Maxwell started around the corner and waited for the man he had met in the Capitol grounds. At 10:15 later Maxwell appeared at police headquarters. He said it took him nearly an hour to "get well" that the Englishman and the stranger were "peels."

Maxwell says his diamond ring is worth $175. He also passed over to the stranger four travelers' checks for $10 each, ten checks for $5 each, and four checks for $10 each. Maxwell says he has been stopping at 46 C Street Northeast during his sojourn in the National Capital.

GLEN ECHO PARK LIKE A FAIRYLAND

Amusement Resort Has Brilliant Opening, as Crowds Enjoy Many New Attractions.

A veritable fairyland of diverse amusements was swung open to an eager public yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, when the Glen Echo Amusement Park was opened for the season. During the afternoon and evening hundreds visited the park. Glen Echo was all aglow with brilliancy and life last night.

A myriad of multi-colored lights threw a fairylike glow over the park, and the laughter of the joyful crowds spoke of the success of the inaugural day.

The free and piles, sea-saw, and swings were the centers of attraction for the large army of children who visited the park. The merry-go-round was well patronized by those young in years. Many of the older persons strolled along the shady paths and others rested in comfortable seats, which were well distributed throughout the park.

Detectives Round Up Flirters in F Street

Pretty Young Woman and Texas Cotton Broker Taken into Custody, and Later Give Colateral for Their Release.

Flirting in F Street, for a long time one of the chief attractions of the popular promenade, last night changed from a pleasing pastime to a pleasure fraught with danger, when Detectives Simpson and Howes, of the First Precinct, started a crusade by arresting pretty Vivian Earle, twenty-one years old, after she had smiled at John Franklin, thirty-one years old, a cotton broker of Houston, Tex.

Miss Earle, who says she resides at 1911 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, was becomingly garbed in white, trimmed in white satin, with a white hand-embroidered bag, white slippers and stockings, and a white bonnet. The police allowed her to depart after depositing $25 collateral.
